THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA will return to the road this Spring! The Metalcore Spring Break Tour will kick off April 17 in Wichita, Kansas and runs through May 14 in Charleston, South Carolina. ERRA, Kingdom of Giants, and Acres will serve as support.

The band will also appear at Sonic Temple and Welcome to Rockville along the way.

Tickets for The Metalcore Spring Break Tour go on sale Friday, December 13 at 10am local time. Get tickets here.

TDWP have also dropped the acoustic version of their biggest streaming hit single "Chemical." The stripped down version further demonstrates the song's heft. Listen here. The accompanying video pays tribute to the fans and the community that TDWP has fostered and that has connected with the track on a deeply personal level. Watch it here.

"To mark five incredible years of 'Chemical' and its impact on both our band and fans, we've recorded a special stripped-down version that lays bare the raw emotion and meaning behind the song," the band states. "Playing it every night on the Eternal Tour has been one of the most powerful moments of the show, and we wanted to share this intimate version with fans around the world. Thanks for listening, it's only 'Chemical.'"

Regarding the tour, TDWP say, "We're beyond excited to announce Metalcore Spring Break! This tour is going to be a full-blown celebration of metalcore gone wild, featuring awesome performances from ERRA, Kingdom of Giants, and Acres. It's going to be massive energy, insane production, and a setlist with all the hits and some surprises you won't want to miss. We're pulling out all the stops to make this a show you will NEVER forget — it's party time!"
