At the intersection of crushing riffs, intricate orchestration, and the darkness of industrial goth resides the monolith known as Suicide Puppets.

The Harrisburg-based sextet has been showcasing their unique blend of metal, goth, and industrial to an ever-growing fanbase. This was captured most recently during their 2021 tour with Soulfly, where they delivered their intense energy and visuals nightly.

Today, the band shares the video for "Piggy." Watch it here.

"'Piggy' is a dark, guttural anthem that pulls no punches," the band says. "It's a raw, unapologetic reflection on the underbelly of society, where every distorted riff and tortured scream exposes the grotesque truths we often ignore — a visceral journey into the heart of despair."

Where Killers Go To Die is a brutal symphony of chaos, where the line between agony and exhilaration fades into a haunting reality. It's not just music — it's the soundtrack to a soul's final descent.

Suicide Puppets' music is featured in several upcoming indie horror films, including The Boy From Below, Skate To Hell, Deathwoods, Blood On The Bleachers, and The Slasher Nurse.
